Gerrard was only sixteen years of age when he served in the Westmoreland Co Militia. He began his service in 1781 under Captain William H. Dozier. During the year the command of the company devolved to Captain William Edward at Stafford's Cliff in the same county.

In 1783 Lieutenant Hutt served another six months tour of duty at Nomini ferry in the same county. The company was assigned to guard the boats and canoes to prevent slaves from escaping to join the enemy. Altogether, according to Mr. Hutt, he served a total of one year.

In answer to the questions prescribed by the War Department, Mr. Hutt stated that he was born in the County of Westmoreland in the year of 1765, and that there was a record of his birth in possession of his brother, William S. Hutt, in Kanawha County, VA, and that he had lived all his life in the County of Westmoreland, VA on the waters of the Nomini Creek. He stated: "I was not drafted, neither did I volunteer, nor was I a substitute. I was enrolled in the usual manner among the Militia of the district in which I resided and was entered on duty by the Commandant of the Regiment" in answer to the 5th interrogatory as stated, and to the 6th interrogatory, as well. His pension application is supported by affidavits from his brother William S. Hutt and Richard Dozier S8349.
